Subject: Tri Plex for 817 St Andrews Street New Westminster

Hello Karin ; just a quick response to the flier I received about the Tri Plex proposed for 817 St Andrews street .

My concern is with the owners choice of tenants - the current dwelling previous to being burned out had a string of unsavory renters .

Over the years with different tenants there were numerous police attended incidents involving firearms / knife attacks & drugs .

I am hopeful that something could be done to attract a better group of tenants or of homeowners . Respectfully

No. You are going to create this monstrosity on a street that is already choked and severely limited with parking. Either provide on-property parking or take this project elsewhere. I for one do not welcome it.

817 St. Andrews Street, New Westminster Proposed Triplex Project

Rezoning and Development permit applications have been submitted to build a passive house Triplex at 817 St. Andrews Street.

The proposed triplex design follows the City's OCP designation residential ground oriented infill housing. The property would be rezoned to a Comprehensive Development (CD) zone from a RS-1 to permit a triplex building.

This design features a three carports to provide off-street parking for three vehicles. By building them at the rear access lane, we are able to maximize the green space at the front of building, thus creating a triplex home that blends into the Brow of The Hill neighbourhood.

We are committed to proactively working with the City and licensed professionals to build a quality homes that meets or exceeds the requirements of the current building code and City's bylaws.

We are hoping to start construction in the Summer of 2022

Bike skills park ready for use

New area near tree nursery and lodge parking lot in Queen's Park

 tmcmanus@newwestrecord.ca

A new bike skills area in Queen's Park is ready for action.

After local residents built jump features in a forested area of Queen's Park in 2020, the city removed the jumps because they weren't considered suitable for public use and staff were concerned they would negatively impact the ongoing ecological restoration in that part of the park.

Parks and rec staff subsequently collaborated with some of the local youths who had built those jumps about the development of a new bike skills park facility in the park.

In July 2021, council approved construction of a new bike skills park facility in an area of the park that's near the city's tree nursery and the Centennial Lodge parking lot. The project includes seven bike features that are connected by a gravel path.

"The bike skills area in Queen's Park is now complete," said Erika Mashig, the city's manager of parks and open space planning, design and construction. "The features have been installed, as well as signage regarding trail safety and etiquette."

Mashig said the project aims to integrate a purpose built-bike park that balances the needs of the biking community - beginners and experts alike. It's also intended to encourage safe and responsible use of the forest and to respect the ongoing ecological restoration efforts within Queen's Park.

"As part of the ecological restoration effort for this particular area, additional vegetation has been planted and split-cedar rail fencing has been installed to help protect both existing and newly planted trees and plants," she said. "The city intends to engage the users of the bike skills Area in future stewardship events to help work on the track, features and with ongoing ecological restoration. Our hope is that we can all work together to keep the bike park in good shape."

In September, two New West residents urged the city to reconsider its plan to build a bike skills area in Queen's Park and to seek additional public input before any further development occurs in forested areas in Queen's Park.

Appearing before city council, they said the area is a "gem of a success story" in terms of an ecological restoration in the park.

"I value it like a jewel," Karl Sturmanis told council. "It's like a natural world in microcosm that should be regarded as a precious resource."

Mayor Jonathan Cote told the delegations he felt the proposed bikes skills area struck a balance of protecting a sensitive area and finding a less sensitive area in the park that could be used for an activity that's growing in demand.

Man charged after attempt to take baby

At attempt to take a baby in a stroller and a fight with a motorist were part of a random attack in downtown New Westminster on Friday night.

The New Westminster Police Department says a man has been charged following a series of events that allegedly included reaching for a baby in a stroller, fighting with the guardian of the child, fighting with a driver after blocking traffic and assaulting a police officer.

About 7:45 p.m. on Friday, Jan 14, the NWPD was called to Sixth and Carnarvon streets for a report of a fight.

Upon arrival, NWPD spokesperson Sgt. Sanjay Kumar said, police learned a suspect had attempted to take a baby and a stroller away from their parents. When they fought off the suspect,

Kumar said the man slammed his hands on the hood of a vehicle in traffic, at which point the driver got out and confronted the suspect. The suspect allegedly spat on an officer while being arrested.

Jamie MacLean, a 46-year-old New West resident, has been charged with one count of mischief and one count of assaulting a police officer.

Every year we team up with the Rotary Club of Burnaby and Monarch Place (a transition home for women and children fleeing domestic violence) to create our major fundraiser "To the Heart of the Matter".

Normally, we have a gala event to raise funds in the traditional way by having a formal dinner, silent and live auction as well as a raffle; however, for 2022 we must adapt this signature event to an online auction and 50/50 raffle appealing to our broad base of supporters. "To the Heart of the Matter" will include an online auction of a variety of attractive gift items available from February 12 to March 05, 2022, allowing people the time and the flexibility to engage from their home, office or cell phone. No entry fees, anyone can participate. Our goal this year is to raise a minimum of $60,000.
