

Attachment 1

New Westminster Record End Print

Article

New Westminster Record moves to digital-only format

Staff
about 23 hours ago

New era: The New Westminster Record is ending its weekly print edition. The Thursday, Aug. 10 issue will mark the last printed paper. | Record staff

Listen to this article
00:00:52

The New Westminster Record is moving into the digital-only age.

Recommended reads for you:

- Equity on the beat: NWPD adopts 'unbiased policing' policy
- New West's Jumble market: Perfect solution for your summer clear-out

Next Thursday, Aug. 10 will mark the final print edition for the Record and its Glacier Media sister publications, the Burnaby NOW and the Tri-City News.

All three publications will continue to have a strong and vibrant presence in their communities via their websites and newsletters.

Publisher Lara Graham noted that it was a difficult decision to make, but it was the right one to respond to changing market conditions in the media industry.

“We’re not going anywhere,” she promised. “We’re still here, and we’ll still continue to provide the quality community journalism that our readers have come to expect over our decades in our communities.”

Want to keep staying on top of the local news? Bookmark our website and sign up for our daily and weekend newsletters.

Leave a comment

Have a story idea?

Letter to the editor

Report a mistake

Reader Feedback (1)