Leave your feedback

Despite being an engaged resident, I somehow missed the opportunities to give feedback earlier, Either that, or I supported the proposal but can't remember having done so and can't find the evidence. I can't imagine that I would have objected to the proposal, not with the housing needs of the city and the area. Now, however, this proposal already feels a bit outdated. I have no problem with the height, even if it had remained six storeys. But...condominium, not rental? We traded away the ground-level retail on a street that needs more retail, not less? Since there are ground level units, does that mean they are accessible? I don't recall seeing anything about accessibility in the various documents. Is there any requirement for accessible units automatically built in? Still support housing here, but uneasy about the details.
